

SEO Guide: E-E-A-T

How to rank faster and
become an expert,
trusted authority.

What is E-E-A-T?

E.E.A.T is not a ranking factor. It is not a signal.

It is a system by which Google Quality Raters determine the quality of content.

Experience, Expertise,
Authoritativeness,
Trustworthiness

E-E-A-T Applies to EVERY Keyword!

Common myth: E-E-A-T only applies to "your money your life" niches, like finance.

Truth: E-E-A-T applies to every query:

Hyung-Jin Kim, the VP of Google Search, says this:

"And E-E-A-T, that template, of how we rate an individual site based on expertise, authoritativeness and trustworthiness, we do it to every single query and every single result."

Authority Backlinks

Backlinks from great websites = strong measure of E-E-A-T.

Here's what Gary Illyes of Google said when asked about E-E-A-T:

“It's largely based on links and mentions on authoritative sites. i.e. if the Washington post mentions you, that's good.”

Stop focusing on getting 10,000 links. Start focusing on getting 50 incredible links.

Reputation

Get good reviews on trusted platforms (Google, Yelp, G2, Clutch, etc) or reviews by reputable blogs (again, more links!)

Straight from Google:

“Use reputation research to find out what real users, as well as experts, think about a website. Look for reviews, references, recommendations by experts, news articles, and other credible information.”

Wikipedia??

From Google:

“See if there is a Wikipedia article or news article from a well-known news site”

Wikipedia requires information about your company to be verifiable from many reliable sources.

Wikipedia is not a ranking factor. Look at the ROOT CAUSE as to why Google cares about it: if Wikipedia is picking you up, you must have a large amount of verifiable notoriety!

Topical Authority

What displays when you Google a brand or name? It should show:

Dozens of in-depth articles, interviews, awards, bylines, podcasts, conferences – all on your core niche.

- Publish accurate, in-depth content
- Get quotes in publications
- Publish more original research
- Podcast + interview

Is there a consensus from others that your content is good and that you are reputable?

Real Experience

Google is shifting away from publishing content for the sake of publishing content.

Gain real-world experience on your subject matter, then write about it.

Prioritize hands-on experience that you can share and prove yourself as a trusted source on the subject before writing about it.

Content Tips

- Publish more.
- Update frequently.
- Stay fresh and top of mind.

Google's John Mueller says:

"It's really hard to call a site authoritative after 30 articles, and especially if you've stopped publishing for a while, I can see how Google might be a bit more conservative with regards to indexing more."
